MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Director for Science and Technology

Bud:

I am sure you have seen some of the publicity growing out of Mr. McNamara's recent testimony concerning Defense Department procurement procedures. He anticipates that DOD will save a very substantial amount of money through incentive type contracting.

Personnel from our Procurement Division in the Office of Logistics have completed a careful study of the revised DOD procedures, and we have tentatively concluded that we can adopt some of them to good advantage, particularly in the field of incentive type contracting. Implementation of this concept in CIA, however, will require changes in current practices not only by the Office of Logistics but by the technical components for whom the contracting is done.

I would appreciate meeting with you and/or appropriate representatives from your office on Thursday, 24 October, at 10 a.m. in Room 7 D 34 at which time the Office of Logistics will brief us on the new DOD procedures, what incentive type contracting means, and how it might be applied in this Agency.
